

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A communication system includes a communication network, a resource-mediating server coupled with the network and one or more communication devices. The resource mediating server is configured to manage information about available resources necessary for execution of a task by the communication device. The communication device is configured for communication with the network and for executing the task using necessary resources accessed over the network, task execution being adapted in response to the information about available resources.